APPAREL | GREETING CARDS | STICKERS | 3D BOOKMARKS

Hi there,

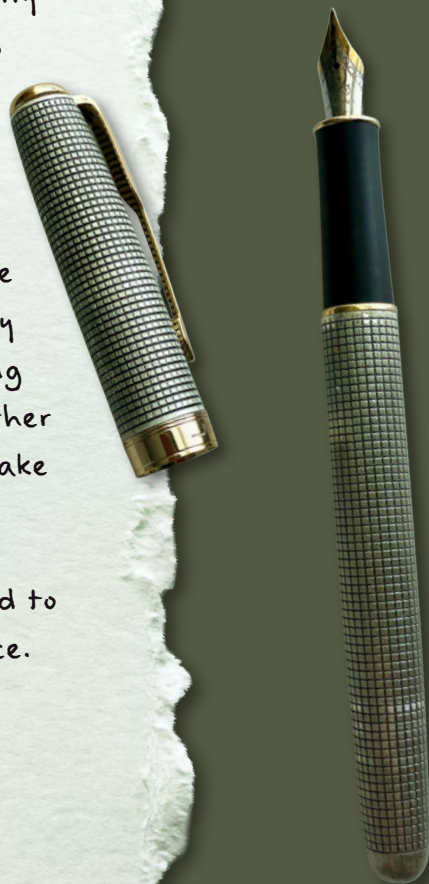

I'm Sarah, a high school senior from Heber, Utah and the artist behind Rewild Design Co. This brand began with a sketchbook and a deep love for the natural world. Over time, it's become a way for me to share that connection through thoughtfully designed goods that invite people to slow down, look closer, and reimagine their relationship with nature.

I create nature-inspired apparel and stationery rooted in storytelling, slow fashion, and a sense of place. My apparel is sustainably and ethically made, and my paper goods are designed to bring a little more intention into the everyday. Whether it's worn, gifted, or written on, everything I make reflects the same care that sparked it.

Thanks so much for taking a look. I'm so honored to have Rewild Design Co. considered for your space.

PACKAGING

Apparel:

I attach a hang tag to each garment that shares a little about me and highlights the piece's sustainable and ethical details. There's a space on the back to add your pricing and/or barcode.

Greeting Cards:

In order to minimize single-use plastics in my packaging, greeting cards do not come individually packaged. Each greeting card includes a kraft paper envelope.

3D Bookmarks:

Each bookmark is individually wrapped in a translucent glassine paper bag (pictured below), labeled with the common name and scientific name of the butterfly. There's space on the back for your pricing and/or a barcode.

Bookmark Display Tips:

I've found that 3D Bookmarks sell best when shoppers can see how magical they are in use. An easy way to demonstrate this is to insert a few into a book (glued or taped if necessary) and flip it so that the spine is facing away from the viewer (see photos on the previous page for examples).

ARTIST & OWNER

MEET THE ARTIST

Where are you based?

I'm currently based in Heber, Utah, wrapped in the embrace of the Wasatch Mountains. I love to hike and explore in the mountains; a lot of my inspiration comes from time spent outdoors here.

How did you get started as an artist?

I'm a self-taught artist and a full-time high school student. I've been drawing and painting since I was a kid, but I really started taking art seriously when I was 14. Over time, it's become my way of learning more about my natural surroundings and capturing my favorite moments in nature.

What inspires your work?

Mostly time spent outside, especially hikes in the mountains or learning about the plants and wildlife in my region. I love trying to translate that sense of place and connection into my designs. I first grew to love nature through birdwatching. From there, my interest has expanded to anything and everything in nature.

Where do you work from?

I work from my home studio, which I share with far too many houseplants. It's where everything from sketching to packaging happens. It's a space that keeps me grounded and inspired.

What's your creative process like?

It usually starts with a hike or a moment in the mountains — something that makes me pause. I take reference photos, make notes, and sketch ideas until a design starts to take shape. From there, I open my watercolor set and get painting. Everything starts from real experience.

How do you hope people feel when they see your work?

I hope they feel a little more grounded, like they've been reminded of something quiet and important. My favorite thing is when a customer finds a shirt with their favorite wildflower or critter on it. It's always a joyful moment.

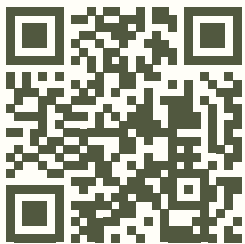

What's next for you?

After high school, I plan to keep growing Rewild Design Co. and continue painting for years to come. One day, I'd love to write and illustrate visually stunning and descriptive field guides, but for now, I'm focused on building a brand rooted in care, creativity, and connection to the natural world.
